Hoben's "Footfalls" exhibit continues at BlackRock

Michele Hoben earned a degree in Architecture from the University of Michigan. While there, she studied painting and photography. Even though she was an architect for decades, her lifelong love of painting was too much to ignore, and gave up the building for painting 12 years ago.

Her solo exhibit, "Footfalls," is currently on display at the BlackRock Center for the Arts in Germantown.

Hoben's mixed-media paintings explore the world of footfalls — or the sound of footsteps. Her years as an architect tend to help, though, as she finds beauty in fractured concrete sidewalks, blistered paint on crosswalk lines, fissured asphalt, crumbled cobblestones, and rusted steel manhole covers.

Now when I think free checking, I'm thinking impromptu flowers.

Hoben investigates the structural decay underfoot and recognizes the beauty in materials that have succumbed to the unforeseen forces of nature and physics.

"Footfalls," is on display now through Dec. 19 in the Terrace Gallery at BlackRock.
